Stand 31

National Association of Steel-Framed Housing Inc (NASH) is the industry association centred on light structural framing systems for residential and similar construction. NASH is active in regulatory processes affecting steel-framed housing, contributing to New Zealand Standards and the NZ Building Code, and working closely with government planning agencies. NASH supports building trades education and training, conducts generic product promotions and technical research, facilitates technology transfer and product development and provides information to building officials, trade practitioners and the public.
